Osher Lifelong Learning Institute
at the University of Virginia
The Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at the University of Virginia (OLLI at UVa) is dedicated to providing active adults with continued intellectual stimulation and enrichment through short courses designed to both inform and entertain. We are a not-for-profit organization formed in association with UVa in 2001. We became part of a national, lifelong-learning network supported by the Bernard Osher Foundation in 2007. Last year our enrollment grew to more than 1,000 members.

We are predominately a volunteer organization and, while we do not pay our faculty, there is a great sense of satisfaction in knowing we are doing something useful and worthwhile. Instructors are offered free tuition for two semesters, the semester in which they teach and the following one. They also may take advantage of Special Presentations and OLLI Outings.

OLLI offers short, university-level courses in:
- Art, Music and Drama
- Contemporary Living
- History and Literature
- Religion, Philosophy and Ethics
- Science and Health
- Social and Political Issues

We are eager to attract faculty who will offer new courses or present different views on current topics.

OLLI courses are taught by active and retired college and university faculty, as well as other specialists in their field. There are writers, librarians, theologians, pilots, artists, government and business executives, physicians, diplomats, historians, scientists, and hobbyists. We are open to any topic of general interest presented by someone with a passion and a commitment to share their knowledge and expertise.

Our instructional family is at the heart of who we are and what we do. We are looking for individuals in our community who would consider teaching with OLLI or who can identify others who might join our faculty.

OLLI instructors enjoy:
- Mature participants with a wealth of experience
- Involved and curious students
- The opportunity to share their knowledge and passion
- Teaching with no tests and no grades
- Short courses
- The rewards of giving back to the community

We offer two semesters annually, each composed of two sessions. The fall semester runs from mid-September to mid-December; the spring semester, from mid-February to mid-May. Classes usually last around 90 minutes and are held once a week for three to six weeks. They are scheduled during the day, Monday through Friday.
